

Week 17 Stock or Bond? - ARG

“If given a chance to invest, would you put your money in a stock or in a bond? Why?”

Firstly, in order to clarify what stock and bond means is that stock represents partial ownership of a certain company while bond is a loan from you to a company or government. If I have a given a chance to invest, it is more practical in a stock especially in prior to the world pandemic. Economy in different states and countries are in their one of the lowest states. But if you are willing for a long-time investment, go for the bond. People nowadays are now financially practical because different companies mostly change in a given time. Being updated in the international companies on where you will invest is most likely a good strategy in what company you would invest in. Stocks are a good way of investing in this time because stocks let you own multiple shares in multiple companies. In stocks, it lets you buy a share and invest in them, and after several years if the company consistently performs well, the success of the company is also your success because you are a partial owner. Stocks can be also known as corporate stock or common stock, or corporate shares. On the other hand, bond can be invested but the risk is high at this time. the company or companies that you lend money on most likely to go bankrupt and close due to this pandemic. Most especially that the new strand of corona virus is out, most of the companies will shutdown giving you a loss of money. Investing in a bond has no equity or shares involved. It is simply lending a company your money and they will put an interest in it.
